

Advisory

Marie Ammar

Marrie Ammar is an educator experienced in local and global contexts, passionate about learning and teaching in multi-lingual, intercultural contexts. She is committed to creating and facilitating engaging learning experiences for youth and adult learners, as well as supporting learners in discovering, developing, and expressing abilities and interests to effect positive change. Marie also has extensive experience in public education, including junior, middle, high school, and university settings, focusing on newcomers. Her youth-related work experiences include non-profit organizations working with refugee students and families, street youth, and developing and facilitating global education initiatives (CIDA). Marie has an educational background that includes a B.Ed., an M.Ed. from the University of Toronto, and a CELTA with Cambridge University. Her involvement includes serving as past national chair of the global education committee of UNICEF Canada.

